

THE WARMTH OF LUXURY INTERIORS

With Caribbean roots, Interior Designer Alison Antrobus seamlessly blends refined luxury with an intuitive understanding of indoor-outdoor living, creating unforgettable homes and boutique hotels.

Over the past decade, her studio Antrobus Design Collective has earned global recognition, received multiple International Property Awards, and has been named one of Architectural Digest's Best Interior Designers in Miami.

With a distinguished roster of A-list clients who rely on her creative vision to deliver exceptional, high-end properties, Alison is also sought after by investors aiming to elevate real estate value. Her work has contributed to record-breaking sales, including a residence she recently designed that was purchased by David and Victoria Beckham in Miami. Before launching her own practice, Alison was invited to open and lead the Miami studio of YOO Ltd, the London-based design and development firm led by John Hitchcox and Philippe Starck. She also worked with Belgian Designer, Axel Vervoordt on a Miami residence on the exclusive Indian Creek Island. Alison describes working alongside these icons as a "Master's Degree in Design," crediting their influence for shaping her expansive perspective on the Decorative Arts.

"With our main studio based in Miami, we offer significant advantages to International clients building holiday homes in the warmth of Florida and the Caribbean. We understand the level of craftsmanship these clients expect and are able to deliver that same standard of design and luxury from a closer vantage point-both physically and culturally." Recently voted Best Interior Design Studio in Miami, Alison Antrobus continues to lead her talented team-collectively bringing more than 50 years of experience to projects that demand the highest level of luxury, creativity, and design storytelling.
